A former Northfield High School (NHS) coach and teacher has been indicted on felony charges of child seduction and possession of child pornography.

Rick Brewer, 58, of Marion, was head coach of the NHS varsity boys basketball team for three seasons, starting in 2018 and ending in 2021.

Brewer was also an assistant coach of the NHS varsity girls softball team from 2020 to 2021, including during their state championship run last year.

On Wednesday, Jan. 19, Wabash Police Department (WPD) public information officer Capt. Matt A. Benson said they had been investigating allegations against Brewer.

Secretary of State candidates face off in a crowded field

Sullivan's campaign raises over $318K in the final six months of 2021

By ROB BURGESS
Wabash Plain Dealer Editor

As the primary filing season continues, the increasingly crowded race for Indiana Secretary of State is heating up.

Secretary of State Hollie Sullivan filed to seek the Republican Party's nomination for Secretary of State on Monday, Jan. 10.

Sullivan is joined by two competitors for the Republican nomination. Diego

Morales served as senior advisor to Vice President Mike Pence while he was governor of Indiana. And, in November 2021, former Newton County Circuit Court clerk Kyle D. Conrad also announced his intentions to seek the nomination.

The Indiana Republican State Convention will take place in Indianapolis on June 18.

Though the primary season is just starting, Sullivan's campaign has already banked a significant amount of money. Sullivan filed her end of the year campaign finance report Tuesday, Jan. 18, and reported

$318,819.13 raised in the final six months of 2021, said campaign manager Whitney Peterson.

"As Secretary Sullivan travels the state sharing what she is doing to fight for safe and secure elections, she is garnering broad support. Over 350 Hoosiers from all corners of the state have partnered with the campaign through financial support," said Peterson.

Sullivan visited Wabash last month to meet with Wabash County Clerk Lori Draper.

Sullivan said she was running to "continue protecting the integrity of Indiana's elections."

Sullivan is an automotive engineer, small business owner, wife and mother. Sullivan and her husband of 25 years, Chad, live and raise their three children – Dalton, Savannah and Sawyer – in Evansville. Before taking office as Secretary of State in March 2021, she served eight years as State Representative for northern Evansville and Newburgh.

As the current Vice-Chair of the Indiana Republican Party, Sullivan "supports conservative causes and candidates across the state," said Brian Gamache, of Sullivan's campaign.

Sullivan said during her time in office, she has partnered with local officials to increase election safeguards with improved equipment.

Owner shuts down local AM station

Wade Weaver continues to run 3 stations after returning license for 1600 WARU AM to FCC

By JARED KEEVER
Peru Tribune Editor

One of Miami County's long-running radio stations can no longer be heard on the AM dial.

The AM station 1600 WARU went off the air at the end of September and the station owner turned the license back in to the Federal Communications Commission.

"That's what you do when you don't want to operate," Wade Weaver told the Peru Tribune on Friday.

Weaver also operates the FM counterpart 101.9 Rocks as well as 105.9 The Bash and its AM counterpart WJOT 1510. He has also represented District 1 on the Wabash City Council since January 2021.

Weaver said the decision to shutdown the local AM station was purely financial.

"It was losing money daily," he said.

Weaver bought the local stations in 2011. At the time, he had been managing them for a few years, he said, and they were being simulcast.

Over years he tried to change things up to keep the AM station afloat.

"We would run ball games ..." he said. "I tried many formats."

That happened in October.

In recent years it was running oldies, but Weaver said fewer and fewer people were listening to AM.

"They are just not doable, really," he said.

Weaver said he finally decided it was time to shutdown the station, enabling him to take down the tower and sell the property it used to broadcast from on Old 24.

That happened in October.

Kindergarten round-ups have been announced for Southwood and Metro North elementary schools and MSD is ready to welcome the Class of 2035, said director of community engagement Laura Langebartels.

Children who will be at least 5 years of age on or before Aug. 1, are eligible to participate in kindergarten for the 2022-2023 school year.

This year's MSD kindergarten round-ups will take place on Wednesday, March 9 at Southwood Elementary School, 840 E. Indiana 124, and Thursday, March 10 at Metro North Elementary School, 3844 W. 200 North.

Langebartels said families are "highly encouraged" to register for the kindergarten round-up no later than Monday, March 7.

"To accommodate social distancing, families will be assigned an arrival time based on their availability," said Langebartels.

Langebartels said guests should be limited to only one or two adult guardians with the child. Guardians should bring a copy of the child's

Every Ind. county now at red COVID-19 advisory level

Millions of N95 masks will be available for free to U.S. residents starting next week

By ROB BURGESS
Wabash Plain Dealer Editor

Last week, the Indiana State Department of Health (ISDH) moved Wabash County's COVID-19 advisory level up from orange, the second-highest level, to red, the highest.

During this week's update on Wednesday, Jan. 19, Wabash County remained in the red.

Now, every county in the state is also at the red level as the Omicron variant continues to sweep the state and nation.

At the state level, the Omicron variant is now dominant, overtaking Delta.

As of Tuesday, Jan. 18, 56.1 percent of tested cases in the state were identified as being Delta, while 43.7 percent of tested cases were identified as being Omicron.

However, as of Thursday, Jan. 21, 25.3 percent of tested cases in the state were identified as being Delta, while 74.3 percent of tested cases were identified as being Omicron.

"To further complicate the situation, we are currently dealing with a shortage of rapid tests," said state health commissioner Dr. Kristina Box during a televised press conference Wednesday, Dec. 29. "This is a national problem, not just an Indiana issue."

While this struggle to find tests continues all over the country, a program that began this week may help somewhat relieve that burden soon.

Starting Wednesday, Jan. 19, residential households in the U.S. can order one set of four free at-home tests from the United States Postal Service (USPS) by visiting <https://special.usps.com/testkits>.

There is a limit of one order per residential address. One order includes four individual rapid antigen COVID-19 tests. The orders will ship free starting in late January.

Also, the Biden administration will begin making 400 million N95 masks available for free to U.S. residents starting next week, now that federal officials are emphasizing their better protection against the omicron variant of COVID-19 over cloth face coverings, according to the Associated Press.

The White House announced Wednesday, Jan. 20 that the masks will come from the government's official birth certificate and vaccination records with them.

"During the round-up, families will have the opportunity to explore the classrooms, interact with teachers, and complete a readiness screening. Health services such as eye exams, dental checks and vaccinations will not in fondling or touching with a child who is 16 or 17 years old and a felony count of possession of child pornography.

The case was opened Thursday, Jan. 13 as Judge Robert R. McCallen III issued an order accepting the indictment along with a warrant.

The initial hearing was held Tuesday, Jan. 18, during which a motion for discovery was filed. Also appearing at the hearing in addition to Brewer were Wabash County Prosecutor William Hartley, Wabash County Probation Officer Jason Fry and Brewer's attorney Alan Zimmerman. Brewer entered a preliminary plea of not guilty. The trial dates of 8:30 a.m. June 21 and 22; along with a pre-trial conference at 1 p.m. May 23; and an omnibus date of March 21 were set. Brewer paid a $220 cash bond and a $10,000 corporate surety.

"(The) defendant may remain out on the previously posted bond. As a condition of bond, he is to have no direct or indirect contact with alleged victim herein," according to court records.

According to a 2018 article in the Plain Dealer, Brewer had many stops at many levels in many states in his time as a head coach. Brewer took over the Norse varsity boys basketball program after spending time in Florida as both a high school and college head coach. Before that, Brewer started his career at Daleville and Frankton before a long run at New Castle as an assistant coach with both the boys and girls teams before eventually taking the head coaching position of the girls basketball team. The stop at Frankton saw Brewer deliver the program its first winning season years before becoming the competitive force the program is now in Class 2A. After stops at Oak Ridge High School, Oviedo High School, Warner Southern College, Webber College and Victory Christian Academy in Florida, Brewer returned to Indiana in 2017 before eventually setting his sights on the Northfield position. During the summer of 2018, Brewer practiced with the team and competed in two weeks of games in the Wabash County YMCA Summer League with other county, conference and local foes.

In June 2019, Brewer self-published a novel through Covenant Books titled, "Jeremy Peters: True Lies and Confessions of a High School All-American." During a September 2019 MSD board meeting, Brewer was recognized for publishing the book.

"Jeremy Peters is a seventeen-year-old senior," reads the blurb on the book's back cover. "He is searching for something. Despite having a girlfriend who loves him, a best friend who is completely loyal, and is the star of the high school football team, he is still searching. Jeremy suffers a potential career-ending injury and then begins a true internal search, which will impact him for the rest of his life. He encounters an unlikely confidant in his archenemy, Bart King. This is Jeremy's search, a book of true lies and confessions."

During the July 13, 2021, MSD board meeting, a recommendation to approve Brewer's retirement "effective immediately" was approved upon a motion was made by Kevin Bowman, seconded by Scott Haupert and unanimously carried.

On Thursday, Jan. 20, MSD superintendent Mike Keaffaber said they did not have any additional comment on the matter at this time.

No further information was available as of press time. This story will be updated as more information becomes available.

ISDH announced it had extended its COVID-19 vaccination clinic at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway through Feb. 26 and has revised the hours of operation.

The clinic is being held in the INDYCAR parking lot at 4551 W. 16th St., Indianapolis, across from Gate 2. It offers the Pfizer pediatric and adult vaccines, as well as the Moderna vaccine. Both primary vaccines and booster doses are available.

"Due to a national shortage of rapid tests, individuals seeking testing at IMS should be prepared to receive a PCR test," stated the ISDH.

If rapid tests are available, they will be available only to individuals age 18 and younger and symptomatic individuals age 50 and older.

Vaccinations and testing are being offered from noon to 8 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays; and from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays.

"Appointments are strongly recommended, but walk-ins will be accepted while capacity permits," stated the ISDH.

Individuals who have already scheduled appointments for 4 to 8 p.m. on Wednesdays and Fridays will be notified about rescheduling.

COVID-19 vaccines are available to Hoosiers age 5 and older, and boosters are approved for eligible individuals age 12 and older. Hoosiers can make a vaccination appointment for the IMS site at www.ourshot.in.gov by searching for ZIP code 46222. Individuals under age 18 can only receive the Pfizer vaccine. Parents seeking pediatric doses for children ages 5 to 11 should verify that birthdates are entered correctly when registering to ensure that a Pfizer pediatric dose is available.

Church 'climate change' denial and struggle to adapt Journalist Michael Kinsley famously added a twist to American politics when he redefined a "gaffe" as when a politician tells the truth – some obvious truth he isn't supposed to say."

As the Rev. Neil Elliot of the Anglican Church of Canada discovered, this term also applies to religious leaders.

After seeing 2018 General Synod reports, the denomination's research and statistics expert produced an analysis that included this: "Projections from our data indicate that there will be no members, attenders or givers in the Anglican Church of Canada by approximately 2040."

Reactions to his candor varied, to say the least.

"I think of it very much like ... people's responses to climate change," said Elliot, updating his earlier remarks in a video posted by Global News in Canada.

Signs of church "climate" change? In the early 1960s, Anglican parishes in Canada had nearly 1.4 million members. But that 2018 report found 357,123 members, with an average Sunday attendance of 97,421. The church had 1,997 new members that year, while holding 9,074 burials or funerals.

Canada's national statistics agency reported that 10.4 percent of all Canadians were Anglicans in 1996, but that number fell to 3.8 percent in 2019.

People have one of three reactions when faced with these kinds of numbers. The first is "denial," said Elliot, counting the options on one hand. "People are saying ... 'It's not happening.' Then there's people who say, 'We can stop it.' And then there's people who say, 'We can adapt.'

"The 'adapt' language is much more rare, and I'm only starting to hear it (in) the media in the last few months," said Elliot. "That's what I'm trying to get us to do within the Anglican church. It's, 'How do we adapt to it?' not, 'How do we stop it?' or ... people burying their heads in the sand."

The decline is real and cannot be denied, he said. However, he is convinced this "decline is going to bottom out, or change. That is, IF we are going to take the opportunity to reframe who we are. If we still say, 'No, we're all about a prayer book that was written 400 years ago,' then people are ... going to arrive at our doorsteps and go, 'Nah. I don't think so.'"

Various reports indicate, logically enough, that Anglicanism is not the only struggling faith tradition in Canada, a nation in which religious trends tend to emerge earlier than in the United States.

Membership in the United Church of Canada – created nearly a century ago by the merger of four mainline Protestant churches – peaked at 1.1 million in the 1960s.

Official reports in 2018

showed 388,363 members, with 120,986 regularly

attending services. Meanwhile, Roman Catholicism

now represents 32 percent of Canadians over the age of 15, according to StatCan, down from 46.9 percent in 1996.

To the south, leaders in the U.S. Episcopal Church keep seeing similar trends. In official 2020 numbers, the denomination's membership fell to around 1.57 million – down from 1.64 million a year earlier, and way down from the 3.4 million members claimed in the heady days of the 1960s. Average

Sunday attendance in 2020

– a year that included some pandemic numbers – fell to 458,179 from 518,411 a year earlier.

How low can things go?

The denomination's official

2020 spreadsheet indicated that, in the extreme case of the Diocese of Northern Michigan, the average

Sunday attendance fell to 233 people out of a total diocesan membership of 908, spread over 21 parishes.

At this point, Episcopalians feel like they are living in the "narthex" between the church life they once knew and the realities seen in the world around them, noted

Presiding Bishop Michael

Curry's address – via Zoom

– to last fall's House of Bishops meeting.

"We're kind of back in our physical church buildings, but kind of not. Narthex. We wonder how many will return," he said. "The remnant will always return. Narthex."

At this point, Curry said his priests and people can dream not of easy recovery, but of a "new and re-formed church, not formed in the way of the world. ... No longer centered on empire or establishment, no longer fixated on the preservation of institutions,

no longer propping up white supremacy or in collusion with anything that hurts or harms any child of God or

God's creation."

SERMONETTE

True revelation

By JERRY GAUTHIER

There are many places today where people seek answers. It can be using online searching where information is at our fingertips. People might prefer watching it "live" on TV or with some documentary series. Answers over life are sung into the ears of many by their favorite music artists. In a more personal way, the comforting direction can come from family members or close friends. Maybe a memorable teacher or coach comes to mind when making critical decisions. Some even lean upon their inner intuition that seems to know best. All these avenues and many others serve to provide answers, but they far exceed merely the intellectual efforts of the mind.

During the season of Epiphany, which means revealing, the church celebrates what God has made known for a world shrouded in darkness. St. John wrote in His Gospel account stating upfront, "For the law was given through Moses; grace and truth came through Jesus Christ" (1:17). Where God affirmed His ordered governance over life with Moses, Jesus came as God seeking the lives of sinners. Laws and works give good answers for life, but all are limited and only for a time. This is why John towards the end of His Gospel declares, "... but these are written so that you may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that by believing you may have life in His name. (20:31).

The various ways to seek answers fall prey to a basic fallacy. It is to find our truth and take comfort in it. In other words, we build idols of all kinds and in every way. It is exactly what Moses witnessed happen right after coming out of Egypt. Israel worshiped a golden calf at Mt. Sinai, while the Lord was giving Moses the Ten Commandments. The Law stands opposed to how we want to make life appear as sinful human beings. Consider all the different spins of the news, social media, and distressing ways people have treated each other during a pandemic. Holding to our self-made truth for answers lacks love for each other, but finally, how turned inward we are against God.

If sinners make their truth, Christ alone seeks us as The Truth. Truly God has become man in Jesus Christ and His will is to reveal Himself as Savior. Not another avenue for answers, Jesus is the life and the light shining upon a world in darkness. Twisted upon the cross and by His victory over sin and death. He now makes truth and love known of Himself to an idolatrous world to believe in the Gospel.

This good news comes now by the distribution of His holy Word and sacraments. The church is not the only place for answers, but a shocking revelation God makes known there. Forgiveness, life, and salvation Jesus brings for you and any. This is not what any seeks after, but God comes with the truth of His love that seeks us.

DAILY SCRIPTURE

This God – his way is perfect; the word of the LORD proves true; he is a shield for all those who take refuge in him.

2 Samuel 22:31

Members of Congress shouldn't be trading stocks

Restoring faith in government is an enormous task. Here's a good way to start: Erect some basic barriers to crookery in Congress.

Lawmakers are privy to all sorts of information that can move financial markets. And they have enormous sway over the economy. And yet, they are still allowed to trade individual stocks. That makes it far too easy for members to abuse their power for their own enrichment – or, almost as bad, to leave the impression that they are doing so.

New legislation from Democratic Senators Jon Ossoff of Georgia and Mark Kelly of Arizona would put an end to that, requiring members of Congress, their spouses, and their dependent children to divest securities and certain other investments or move them into blind trusts. Vanilla investments like diversified mutual funds and treasury bills would not be affected.

"There's a lot of influence that people have and access to a lot of information, and there should be a lot of responsibility that goes with that," Kelly told The Wall Street Journal.

If the policy case for passing the legislation is clear, so is the political case. A December poll commissioned by the conservative advocacy group Convention of States Action found that three-quarters of voters – including overwhelming majorities of Democrats, Republicans, and independents – believe lawmakers and their spouses have an "unfair advantage" in the stock market. A January poll from the progressive firm Data for Progress found two-thirds of voters think lawmakers should be banned from trading stocks.

Burr steps down as Senate Intelligence Committee chair for duration of probe into his stock sales

That kind of public support should make the Ossoski-Kelly legislation a slam dunk for Democratic congressional leaders, who have seen much of their agenda stall in recent months and are in desperate need of some wins before the midterm elections this fall.

But, apparently, it hasn't.

House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, whose husband frequently trades stocks, says she is opposed to investment restrictions on lawmakers. "We're a free-market economy," she told reporters. "They should be able to participate in that."

But owning stock and actively trading it are two different matters, and no one is saying that a lawmaker can't trade after leaving office if they want to put free-market participation above public service.

If Democrats fail to move, they could cede the high ground on this issue to an ethically bankrupt GOP. House minority leader Kevin McCarthy says he may support the push to ban lawmakers from trading stocks if Republicans win control of the narrowly divided chamber in November.

Critics of the new legislation point out that it's already illegal for members of Congress to trade on insider information under a law known as the Stop Trading on Congressional Knowledge Act of 2012. But that measure, which also requires disclosure of stock market moves within 45 days, hasn't done enough to buttress public confidence in Congress. And it's difficult to enforce because it's harder to prove that a decision to buy or sell a stock is made based on a given piece of information than it is simply to ban active trading.

At the onset of the pandemic, several senators, their spouses, or their investment advisers dumped stock after lawmakers attended private briefings on COVID-19. Some of the sales helped officials avoid hundreds of thousands of dollars in losses when the virus battered the stock market. Lawmakers insisted they hadn't made use of insider information. And they claimed vindication when the Federal Bureau of Investigation closed their cases.

But even when these kinds of cases aren't prosecuted, they can still shake public confidence. And ultimately, public confidence is what matters most here. Trust in government is at worrisome lows. We have seen, all too vividly these past few years, what that can do to a democracy.

So when lawmakers have an opportunity to restore a bit of faith in Washington, they should seize it.

Faith community calls on Sen. Messmer to hear climate bill

As a coalition of Indiana faith communities, we join together with a responsibility to care for our neighbors, the future of our communities and creation. Because of this conviction, we urge the Environmental Affairs Committee – Sens. Messmer (Chair), Niemeyer, Baldwin, Buck, Garten, Gaskill, Sandlin, Zay, Yoder, Niezgodski and Pol – to hold a hearing for Senate Bill 255, which creates a Climate and Environmental Justice Task Force.

While representing a diverse set of faith traditions we all recognize that climate change threatens the health of our society and damages our spiritual relationship with the world around us. In Indiana, we experience numerous consequences of climate change including extreme heat days, severe storms, flooding and poor air quality. While only the 17th most populous state in the nation, we are the eighth largest emitter of climate-changing gases. Our state needs to change its ways by looking toward the future and not remain tethered to outdated policies.

Indiana is uniquely poised to become a leader in turning the tide of climate change. We have major universities to discover new technologies and the industrial infrastructure to manufacture them. We are a leading agricultural state with many opportunities to implement carbon sequestration practices. With the right leadership, we can build our economy and improve the welfare of our citizens while lowering carbon emissions.

Bipartisan SB 255, could finally launch Indiana into that leadership role. This legislation is the culmination of many months of hard work and dedication by Confront the Climate Crisis, a group of concerned Indiana high school students, and their collaboration with Senator Ron Alting. SB 255 creates a diverse multi-member task force to develop an Indiana climate action plan to address climate mitigation while promoting sustainable economic development.

This bill sits in the hands of the Environmental Affairs Committee and will die if it is not given a fair public hearing. Motivated by our faith and representing our communities in the state of Indiana, we call on Senator Messmer, and the other Senators in this committee, to perform their duty as elected public servants by listening to Hoosiers and holding a hearing for SB 255.

Science is at the heart of democracy

It's time to remind people that science is not equally favored among all forms of government. Democracies like Rome, Athens and the United States have been celebrated as economic and technological wonders of the world because of their heavy focus on science.

Early democracies placed science personnel in high places in the government, but in monarchies, all knowledge and wisdom came from the king.

In many unfortunate places and times, the people are happy to be lifeless pawns in aristocracies, oligarchies, and monarchies. However, when badly oppressed people become aware of science, they begin to assert power over their lives and look for a better form of government.

Historical science reaches a high state of development and importance in a democracy. A monarchy could care less for it. Dynasties of kings keep records of the propaganda achievements and wars they have fought, but they make little effort to improve the knowledge base by unleashing the memory or creativity of the common folk. An aspiring group of ordinary people wants to know about other people in the past who have become independent, and how they did it, so they go looking for those stories.

They also look about for a political philosophy that supports the view that they can take care of themselves. Science supports the equality of humankind and becomes their friend.

The good things that unite us (mostly)

By MARK FRANKE

I have given up all hope of returning to the day of e pluribus unum. I certainly don't expect anyone in Washington D.C. or the New York City media center to repent of their divisive ways and take on this noble cause.

So what? They don't dictate how I live my life or the way I interact with other people. Let them continue to be mired in Donald Trump's undrained swamp, rewriting history to suit their own prejudices and acting more and more as immature juveniles in their incessant name-calling of anyone who isn't marching lockstep to their ideology.

As for me, I don't intend to lead Thoreau's life of quiet desperation. I have too many good things in my life, things I should be thankful for receiving.

Let's talk about music. I have rather eclectic tastes in music, including baroque and blues and jazz and 1960s rock. The American Legion post I frequent usually has blues playing on the jukebox. One of the regulars supervises this and he has eclectic tastes similar but not identical to mine. An added benefit is that the volume is carefully controlled so as not to be obnoxious.

I have a cousin who has a doctorate in folk music, specializing in Hoosier barn dances. Although he lives in Chicago, he visits frequently and stays at our house during his returns to Fort Wayne. He always brings his instruments and we are treated to a mini-concert on most of these visits. He has reawakened in me a love for that old-style music that is in my heritage.

When he was here for Thanksgiving, we had some new neighbors over and the husband brought his banjo so he could play along. That is another thing that brightens my life – neighbors. Our cul-de-sac is very close, helping each other with leaves and snow work and stepping up whenever one of us has an emergency. A neighborhood boy suddenly developed a brain tumor, blessedly now completely gone. We all had prayers in our hearts and support signs in our yards, violating our association covenants. No one complained.

We get together frequently on our patios in the summer and inside during the more inclement weather. One neighbor has a hobby of collecting vintage movies so we have irregular movie nights. And you can bet that as soon as one of us starts a project of any significance, the others ask if they can help.

We love to talk about our grandchildren, which are the most rewarding part of my senior years. Two of our grandchildren live nearby so they spend a lot of days . . . and nights . . . at our house. I volunteer at the school they attend so at least one morning each week I am the school bus. After a career in higher education, it is so rewarding to spend time volunteering at an elementary school. And I get to see my grandchildren during the school day.

Being at our church's school, I have the opportunity to be a role model for these youngsters. I am an all-purpose volunteer, doing maintenance projects and helping out whenever a teacher asks. One duty I have is to teach flag etiquette to the seventh- and eighth-graders who post and retire the colors each day. I also train these boys to be acolytes at daily chapel, preparing them to be ushers at Sunday services after their confirmation.

If my life isn't joyful enough already, the calendar tells me that we are less than a month away from pitchers and catchers reporting for spring training. Baseball is the quintessential American sport – no violence but lots of strategic decision-making. The drama of a one-on-one confrontation between pitcher and batter is unique in that it is just the starting point for a team effort to produce either a run or an out.

I am trying to stay positive, but all is not well in my self-imagined nirvana of baseball. The players and owners are arguing over each side's cut of billions of dollars collected from us fans. I suppose that is a lot of money to everyone's thinking other than the Federal Reserve, but still. Do these people understand that the split won't matter if the season doesn't start on time? Shouldn't the commissioner knock some sense into them? Oh, I forgot. The commissioner is Rob Manfred, who views his role as keeping the woke mob happy. He doesn't have time to waste on solving baseball's most pressing problem: the time of games. And that is moot if they don't bother playing.

Needless to say, I am not a fan of Rob Manfred. I only bring this up as a cathartic exercise, which psychologists say is good for the soul. Maybe, but my soul is content with music, neighbors and grandchildren. And, come April, baseball. I hope.

A recipe for wanderlust

It's wanderlust time, and this year it's a doozy. Thanks to the seasonal convergence of cabin fever, post-holiday decompression and (elephant in the room) pent-up travel cravings, the urge to flee to a far-flung destination is all-consuming. Dreams of leaving the careful confines of our homes and comfort of our fleece jammies (which we now refer to as Day Clothes) tease and distract. Yet, real life persists, and we refrain from jumping on an airplane, as our dreams also happen to collide with practical matters, such as work, school, weather and, yes, a healthy dose of caution.

So why not improvise and bring travel home to your kitchen? Tuck away the passport, hold off on booking a reservation, and turn to your spice cabinet and a cookbook (much less expensive than a plane ticket) for relief and cultural inspiration. It won't be the same as a long-haul vacation, of course, but at least you can stay in your pajamas.

Today, we travel to Morocco. This stew is fragrant and meaty, softly sweetened with figs, heady with harissa, and redolent with ras el hanout, which is a North African spice blend consisting of an entire shelf of spices, including cinnamon, cardamom, turmeric, ginger and clove. Ras el hanout is an Arabic term that means head of the shop or best on offer.

The blend will vary from cook to cook, or merchant to merchant, and can contain upward of 50 spices. It's an essential ingredient to the deep and rich flavor of this stew. You don't need 50 spices to make your own blend, and most likely you have many of the key spices at home, so I've included a recipe below to make your own. Otherwise, you can purchase ras el hanout in the spice aisle of well-stocked supermarkets.

North African Lamb Stew With Figs and Chickpeas

Active time: 30 minutes

Total time: 3 to 3 1/2 hours

Yield: Serves 6

2 1/2 to 3 pounds boneless lamb leg, excess fat trimmed, cut in 1 1/2- to 2-inch chunks

Kosher salt

Freshly ground black pepper

2 tablespoons olive oil

1 large onion, chopped

1 large carrot, chopped

3 garlic cloves, chopped

1 tablespoon grated fresh ginger
1 teaspoon ground cumin
1 teaspoon ground coriander
1/2 teaspoon ground paprika
1 (14-ounce) can Italian plum tomatoes with juice
2 cups chicken stock
12 dried Turkish figs, halved
1 (2-inch) cinnamon stick
2 teaspoons ras el hanout (recipe below)
1 (14-ounce) can chickpeas, drained
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1 tablespoon harissa or red chili paste
Chopped fresh cilantro leaves for garnish

Preheat the oven to 325 degrees. Generously season the lamb with salt and pepper.

Heat 2 tablespoons olive oil in a large Dutch oven or ovenproof pot with lid over medium-high heat. Add the lamb in batches, taking care not to overcrowd the pan, and brown well on all sides. Transfer the lamb to a bowl.

Pour off all but 1 tablespoon fat from the pot (or add 1 tablespoon oil). Add the onion and carrot and saute until soft, about 3 minutes, stirring up any brown bits. Add the garlic and ginger and saute until fragrant, about 30 seconds, then stir in the cumin, coriander and paprika, and stir for 15 to 30 seconds to lightly toast the spices.

Add the lamb and any collected juices, the tomatoes, stock, figs, cinnamon stick, ras el hanout, 1 teaspoon salt and 1/2 teaspoon black pepper. The lamb should be submerged in the stock. If not, add additional stock to cover.

Bring to a simmer, cover the pot, and transfer to the oven. Cook until the lamb is very tender, 2 to 2 1/2 hours, stirring occasionally.

Transfer to the stovetop and stir in the chickpeas, brown sugar and harissa. Simmer over medium heat for 5 to 10 minutes, then taste for seasoning.

Ladle into bowls. Serve garnished with fresh cilantro.

Ras El Hanout

Makes scant 1/2 cup

1 tablespoon ground cinnamon

1 tablespoon ground coriander

1 tablespoon ground nutmeg

2 teaspoons allspice

2 teaspoons ground cumin

2 teaspoons ground ginger

2 teaspoons ground turmeric

2 teaspoons ground black pepper

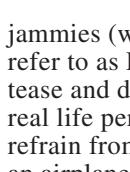

2 teaspoons ground cardamom

1/2 teaspoon ground cloves

1/2 teaspoon ground cayenne

Combine all the spices together in a bowl and mix well. Store in a glass jar in a cool, dark place for up to 3 months.

Why is it better to wear an N95 than a cloth mask right now?

By EMMA H. TOBIN

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Why is it better to wear an N95 than a cloth mask right now?

Health experts suggest stepping up protection against the highly contagious omicron variant with stronger masks such as N95s or KN95s.

It's especially important now with health care systems under strain, and with people in higher-risk situations such as crowded, indoor settings for extended periods, says Linsey Marr, who studies viruses at Virginia Tech.

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recently updated its guidance to recommend the kinds of masks used by health care workers, but also noted it's important to pick a mask that fits well and that you'll wear consistently.

"Our main message continues to be that any mask is better than no mask," CDC spokeswoman Kristen Nordlund said in a statement.

Previously, the CDC had said N95 masks should be reserved for health care workers because of supply shortages. There's a special category of "surgical N95" masks that are generally not available for sale to the public.

lic that the CDC says should continue to be reserved for health care settings.

N95s have a tighter fit to your face than cloth masks and are made with a special material designed to block 95 percent of harmful particles. The fibers are pressed closer together than in cloth masks and have an electrostatic charge that attracts molecules to stick to the mask rather than passing through.

KN95s and KF94s offer a similar level of protection. A full list of masks that meet an international quality standard is available on the CDC website.

But be careful when buying. The counterfeit market is huge, and about 60 percent of KN95s in the U.S. are fake and do not meet quality standards, according to the CDC.

It's hard to tell just by looking if a mask is counterfeit, so experts suggest buying directly from reputable sellers. Project N95 is also a known seller of valid brands, and Marr says she buys masks through industrial suppliers like Grainger or McMaster-Carr.

If you find certain N95s difficult to wear for long periods, experts suggest exploring the different shapes and styles available to see what works best for you.

Tapping retirement funds to invest in real estate is a terrible idea

Even if Baltimore State's Attorney Marilyn J. Mosby isn't guilty of the charges brought against her, she is certainly guilty of making a monetarily bad financial move.

Michelle Singletary

Mosby, D., has been indicted by a federal grand jury on two counts each of perjury and making false loan applications.

The indictment stems from her claim that she experienced "adverse financial consequences" and thus was entitled to withdraw money from her City of Baltimore retirement fund under a pandemic-related provision intended to help struggling Americans.

Federal prosecutors allege she lied about suffering a coronavirus-related financial hardship, which would have allowed her to avoid paying a 10 percent early-withdrawal penalty from her retirement account.

The 41-year-old prosecutor has denied the charges, even going before a church congregation Sunday asking for their prayers.

"Without equivocation, I am innocent on the charges levied against me," Mosby told churchgoers. "I have done nothing wrong."

When asked about her use of the retirement money, Mosby attorney A. Scott Bolden said in an interview: "We probably wouldn't comment on that. That kind of gets to the heart of our case."

According to the indictment, Mosby withdrew money from her 457(b) retirement account, once for $40,000 and another time for $50,000, to use for the down payments

on vacation properties in

Kissimmee and Longboat

Key in Florida.

"A person should not use funds from their retirement plan to buy real estate," said Ernest Burley, a certified financial planner and owner of Maryland-based Burley Insurance and Financial Services.

"I always advise clients to save for any future purchase or project instead of tapping their retirement plan."

Not a single financial professional I spoke with would advise their clients to pull out funds from their workplace retirement accounts to invest in real estate, even in a vacation haven such as Florida.

"Very often people get themselves into trouble financially because of their own poor judgment or bad behavior," said Ric Edelman, host of "The Truth About Your Future," a nationally syndicated radio program.

"Retirement accounts are designed to provide you income in retirement. If you want to buy a boat or travel around the world or pay for college, you need to find those assets elsewhere."

The current low-interest-rate environment and supercharged housing markets with property

bidding wars are prompting people to make unwise

financial decisions,

said Carolyn McClanahan,

a certified financial planner

who founded the fee-only Life Planning

Partners based in Jacksonville, Fla.

"I have a lot of experience with people doing these sorts of things in a crazy real estate market,"

McClanahan said.

The repercussions of using retirement money for this type of investing are

fivefold, Burley said:

■ Consider the tax bite. The money that is withdrawn has to be claimed as ordinary income, and the person has to pay income taxes on the withdrawal. "It's not smart," McClanahan said. "You're paying this big income tax bill to invest in something after tax."

■ The impact of a 10 percent early-withdrawal penalty. The indictment accuses Mosby of illegally taking advantage of a provision under the Coronavirus Aid, Relief and Economic Security (Cares) Act to avoid paying a 10 percent penalty for the early withdrawals.

Ordinarily, if you are younger than 59 1/2, you are subject to a 10 percent early-withdrawal penalty on top of the income tax owed on your withdrawal. But under the Cares Act, if you experienced financial hardship related to the pandemic, the penalty was waived for withdrawing money from individual retirement accounts and defined contribution plans, such as a 401(k) or the similar 457(b) retirement account.

However, let's say Mosby is proved innocent. Penalty-free does not mean tax-free. She still has to pay federal and state taxes on the money she took out of her retirement plan.

Here's the bottom line on this point: When you add in the tax hit of withdrawing the money, including a possible 10 percent penalty, you're severely overpaying for the property compared with someone who's buying it without using retirement assets, Edelman said. "And that additional cost makes the financial transaction a very bad deal."

■ You lose the advantage of having your money grow tax-deferred. For instance, let's say you withdraw $50,000 from your retirement account. That money will no longer be in the retirement plan potentially earning gains for you.

■ Don't discount the debt. If the retirement money is used to buy real estate but the person is taking on a mortgage, they are adding debt to their financial situation, Burley said. "I know people say a mortgage is good debt, but it is debt nonetheless," he said. "So instead of having the money in the retirement plan, the person has added debt to their monthly financial picture."

■ People often underestimate the cost of ownership. Even if the property is purchased in full, it costs money to own real estate — maintenance, insurance, repairs, upkeep, homeowner association fees, etc. Do you have extra funds to cover those expenses and the mortgage if you lose your rental income for any period of time?

I'm feeling a bit of déjà vu. Just before the 2008 housing bust, people lost their minds trying to make it rich in real estate. And we know how that ended. It often ends badly for many people who try to borrow their way to wealth.

LISTEN & LEARN

In our fast-paced world do we listen less, or do we listen in different ways... video meetings instead of visits, text-messages instead of telephone conversations, MP3 players instead of concerts? In fact, we can listen more... to age-old wisdom, to worthwhile social mores, and to solid spiritual principles. Proverbs 4:13 instructs, "Hold on to instruction, do not let it go; guard it well, for it is your life." We must carefully choose who we listen to and not assume that we ourselves always have the answers. We can find instruction in many ways; one sure place to find it is in our local church or synagogue. Listen and learn about your Heavenly Father as you worship this week, He has the wisest advice.

Think your home value is soaring? Talk to a farmer

By SCOTT MCFETRIDGE

Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa — Fourth-generation corn and soybean farmer Jeff Frank doesn't feel rich, but simply based on the skyrocketing value of his land in northwest Iowa, it's an apt way to describe him, even if he laughs at the idea.

He lives in the same nearly century-old house, grows veggies in the family garden and shops at the same grocery store about 15 miles down the road. "We live the same way we have all of our lives," he said.

Still, even if Frank's life hasn't changed, the several hundred acres he owns about 80 miles northwest of Des Moines have suddenly made him worth millions of dollars.

It may come as a surprise to city dwellers excited by their home values that countless farmers like Frank are actually experiencing a real estate boom that makes residential prices pale in comparison. While median existing-home prices rose by 15.8 percent in the U.S. last year, farmland values went up about double that rate in places like Iowa.

"I'm definitely surprised by the magnitude," said Wending Zhang, an economist at Iowa State University who oversees an annual farmland value survey.

The rising values, especially in the Midwest, are due to high prices being paid for the key commodity crops of corn and soybeans, plentiful harvests in recent years coupled with low interest rates and optimism the good times will continue.

But they're a mixed blessing. They're enriching farmers who already have a lot of land, but making it much harder for small operators or younger farmers starting out to get land unless they happen to inherit it.

Most purchases are by operations that see the value of larger scale, seizing the chance to buy nearby land.

While median existing-home prices rose by 15.8 percent in the U.S. last year, farmland values went up about double that rate in places like Iowa.

"If you miss this opportunity, you may not get another chance," Zhang said, describing the current mood.

As for consumers, higher land costs typically don't affect grocery prices.

Historically, farmland values rise and fall, but in the past couple decades they have mostly risen, and in the past year they have risen a lot — 33 percent in Frank's part of the state and 29 percent throughout Iowa, one of the nation's top agricultural states. Agricultural prices also have soared elsewhere in the Midwest and have climbed in most other parts of the country, too.

Federal Reserve Banks in Chicago and Kansas City reported double-digit increases in Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, Missouri and Nebraska.

In Iowa, average farmland has risen from $7,559 an acre in 2020 to $9,751 an acre in 2021.

Nationally, farmland was up an average of 7 percent but that doesn't include the last half of 2021, when prices really took off in many areas.

Farmland prices have even climbed in California despite concerns about persistent drought. In 2021, the average prices of $10,900 an acre was up 9 percent from 2020.

The land purchases augment an existing national trend of more agricultural production coming from ever-larger farms.

Dan Sumner, an agricultural economist at the University of California-Davis, credits some of the rising value in switching to higher-value crops, such as replacing alfalfa with nut trees.

Overall, though, Sumner said farmers are feeling good about their future.

"It reflects confidence in the economics of agriculture," he said.

The upswing follows tumultuous years of trade wars, market breakdowns due to the coronavirus pandemic and drought in much of the West.

For individual farmers, the biggest benefit of rising values is that they can borrow money at better rates for annual needs like seed and fertilizer and longer-term investments like tractors and even more land.

The high prices have prompted plenty of people to buy and sell land, leading to a record of $765 million in agricultural land sales last year overseen by Farmers National Company, one of the nation's largest landowner services companies.

Randy Dickhut, a Farmers National real estate broker in Omaha, Nebraska, said a more typical year would see about $500 million in sales.

"It's been very busy," Dickhut said. "It's certainly easy to sell."

But Holly Rippon-Butler, who runs a dairy with her parents in upstate New York, called the farmland prices increases "just nuts."

"The hard reality is, buying land is almost impossible unless you have some preexisting source of generational family wealth," said Rippon-Butler, who works with the National Young Farmers Coalition, an organization the among other priorities advocates for policy changes and public funding that would enable more people to have access to land.

Given high land prices, Rippon-Butler said beginning farmers she encounters typically work as little as a quarter-acre of land and see 20 acres as a relatively large operation. Many farmers also rent land, and as values rise, so do rental rates.

Boyfriend's 'chatty' habit makes girlfriend jealous

DEAR ABBY: I've been going out with this guy for a couple of months. The problem is, he has to ALWAYS talk to every woman he sees – from a two-second conversation to a several-minute conversation. He doesn't even know 99 percent of them.

When we go to a store, I feel like I'm invisible. He'll walk away from me and start talking to women. I don't trust him completely because sometimes he flirts or says something that could be taken in a sexual way, and I worry that one of these women could take it like he's interested in her.

I don't want to break up with him. I love him. But I feel I have reason to be jealous. I wish I was the only girl for him. Please give me advice. – Not Number One In Pennsylvania

DEAR NOT NUMBER ONE: If you have discussed this with him and it persists, listen to your intuition. If he loved you, he would not be chatting up other women. If a man makes you feel like you are not No. 1, get rid of him before he destroys your self-esteem.

DEAR ABBY: We have a neighbor who likes to go out with us to the casinos, restaurants and various other places. This is doing her a favor, but she never contributes toward the transportation. When we go out with other couples, we alternate driving or help to pay for fuel. All we get from her is, "Thank you. Let me know when you're going next time."

I know she reads your column. I hope she reads this and realizes this sounds like her and takes the hint. What do you think is the best way to handle this situation? – Always The Taxi

DEAR ALWAYS: Your friend may be an avid "Dear Abby" reader, but what if – heaven forbid – she misses the column today and doesn't see your letter? The "best" way to handle this would be for you to take the bull by the horns and address the problem directly with her.

DEAR ABBY: My 4-year-old grandson, "Johnny," is obsessed with all things military. Everything he picks up is a pretend gun, sword or blaster. I know we played cowboys and Indians as kids, pointing sticks or our hands and shouting "Pow! You're dead!" and none of us turned into shooters. But today's climate is more violent. Johnny has already gotten into trouble at preschool for pointing and making shooting noises. Is there anything we can do to discourage this behavior? Does he need professional help? – Unclear In California

DEAR UNCLEAR: Because Johnny has gotten into trouble for pretending to play with guns, his parents should explain to him why it is not OK to do that at school. Unless there is something going on with your grandson that you omitted from your letter, he should not need professional intervention for acting like a normal boy.

Children need to understand that Jesus is not a 'fictional' character

Q: I've always allowed my kids to read fantasy stories and watch cartoons, but I tell them it's just pretend.

Recently my 10-year-old son told me that he couldn't believe in Jesus because he was just another superhero. This has frightened me. – C.P.

A: One definition of a "superhero" is a "benevolent fictional character." While Jesus Christ is certainly benevolent, He is not fictional. He is the One and only Son of God clothed in human flesh. His purpose was not to save people from a villain, but from sin.

Children need to understand that Jesus is not a "fictional" character, but alive and active in the world today. He lived on Earth and performed miracles that transformed people's lives – He didn't come to entertain mankind.

He is not a caped crusader – He is the crucified Christ. He is not make-believe – He is Master. He is not a legend – He is Lord. He isn't created by fantasy – He is favored by God. He is not an icon – He is the Intercessor. He is not a force – He is the Forgiver. He is not imaginary – He is infallible. He does not vanish into exile – He redeems to the end. He is not a virtual winner – He is the Victor. He does not resemble hope – He is the resurrection of hope. He is not a revolutionary – He is the Righteous Ruler. He is not a superhero who falters – He is the Savior who rescues. He is not a knight in hiding – He is the coming King.

While fantasy encourages creativity in children, it is important to teach the truth of God. He gave us children so we could prepare them to become adults. Let's remember to "train up a child in the way he should go" (Proverbs 22:6).

Indiana beats No. 4 Purdue 68-65

BLOOMINGTON (AP) — Rob Phinisee spent four seasons waiting for a moment like the one he celebrated Thursday night.

It even took him two chances to cash in.

The junior guard scored 17 points in the first half and then closed out a career-high 20-point game by making the go-ahead 3-pointer with 16.5 seconds left to send Indiana past No. 4 Purdue 68-65 for Phinisee's first win over his hometown school.

Phinisee was sensational on a night when the Hoosiers (14-4, 5-3 Big Ten) desperately needed him. He made his first six shots, his first three 3s, had four steals and had a season-high point total – all in the first half.

With All-American candidate Trayce Jackson-Davis limited to just 11 minutes total because of foul trouble, Indiana relied heavily on its perimeter players. Xavier Johnson added 18 points, Trey Galloway scored eight and harassed Purdue guard Jaden Ivey on defense, and Phinisee played his best overall game all season.

As a result, the Hoosiers snapped a nine-game losing streak against their biggest rival, and thousands of screaming fans stormed the court when Ivey's 3-pointer to force overtime rolled out as the buzzer sounded.

The Boilermakers (15-3, 4-3) lost for the first time in their last six trips to Assembly Hall.

Fifth-year senior CJ Hampton, from Hammond and Griffith High School, became the 32nd player in Manchester University men's basketball history to score 1,000 career points.

Hampton joins 1,000 point club as Spartans men's basketball takes down Beavers 84-69

Manchester will be back at home on Saturday, Jan. 22 against Earlham College

By DILLON BENDER

Fifth-year senior CJ Hampton, from Hammond and Griffith High School, became the 32nd player in Manchester University men's basketball history to score 1,000 career points on Wednesday evening as the Spartans took down the Bluffton Beavers by a final score of 84-69.

Sitting at 999 career points entering play on Wednesday, Hampton wasted no time in joining the 1,000 point club as he scored a driving layup on the third possession of the contest.

Visiting Bluffton kept pace with the Spartans through 20 minutes of play on Wednesday evening inside of Stauffer-Wolfe Arena. The Beavers built as large as an eight-point lead in the period, however, Manchester was able to close the half with a strong burst and took a 43-40 lead into the locker room at halftime. First-year

Bryant Smith, from West Lafayette and Harrison High School, buried a triple just before the halftime buzzer to give the Spartans the narrow advantage.

After Bluffton shot a hot 55.2 percent (16-29) from the field in the opening half, the Spartans' defense clamped down and limited the Beavers to just 38.7 percent (12-31) shooting in the second period.

While Manchester's defense improved, its offense also got going in the second half. A 22-10 surge midway through the half gave control of the contest back over to the Black and Gold. The Spartans would build as much as a 19-point advantage in Wednesday's win. Manchester out-scored Bluffton 41-29 in the second half.

For the game, five Spartans scored in double figures. Brandon Christlieb, from Ashley and Prairie Heights High School, led all scorers with 19 points. He added six rebounds and had a pair of emphatic dunks in transition. First-year Logan Willoughby, from Greenwood and Whiteland Community High School, scored 17 points in

11 minutes off the bench. Willoughby shot a perfect 6-6 from the field and was a perfect 5-5 from three-point territory. # I CAN HEAR, BUT I CAN'T UNDERSTAND

Did you know that the earliest sign of hearing difficulty is often the complaint that "I can hear, but I can't understand." While this type of comment may seem contradictory, it makes a lot of sense to the hearing care professionals at Beltone. In an industry that is often confusing to consumers – our goal is to make patients comfortable in a no pressure environment. At Beltone, our hearing screenings and evaluations are always complimentary. We take the time to get to know you and your medical history and explain the results of your evaluation in an easy-to-understand way.

What you can expect at Beltone:

Great hearing devices: Our advanced digital technology gives you speech clarity with minimal background noise.

Customer service: From day one, we established a set of values unlike anything else in the industry – making your health our number one priority.

Exclusive BelCare: Receive a lifetime of care and service for both you and your device.

Hearing aids are not just to help you hear but are critical to improving your brain's ability to decode speech. If hearing loss is left untreated, speech discrimination drops over time. This is because the part of the brain that decodes speech is not getting any exercise. Like a muscle without exercise, the ability to decode speech will deteriorate, but unlike a muscle, in most cases you can't get it back. This is why it's very important to get a hearing aid when you need one, rather than waiting until you can't hear at all.

P.S. We know there are hundreds of hearing aid advertisements out there promising different things. We see the news stories that talk about over-the-counter hearing aids. We can tell you the truth about "cheap" hearing aids – they don't work very well. At Beltone we are dedicated to finding a hearing solution that is right for both you and your budget!
